Fort Taber~Fort Rodman Military Museum

May 23rd Speaker— Kevin M. Levin

When Kevin Levin was with us last, his topic was based on his book, Remembering The Battle of the Crater: War as Murder. He also has written, Searching For Black Confederates: The Civil War's Most Persistent Myth. The topic for this month’s Round Table meeting is; Teaching the History and Memory of the Confederate Flag. Kevin is the creator and editor of the Blog, Civil War Memory. He is an historian and former high school history teacher based in Boston. Over the last fifteen years he has taught history on the high school and college levels, most recently as a Visiting Instructor of History at the American Antiquarian Society in Worcester, MA. Previously he taught at Gann Academy in Waltham and the St. Anne’s—Belfield School in Charlottesville, Virginia, where he offered courses in American and European History, American Studies, the Civil War Era, Lincoln, Race and Gender, Women’s History, and the Holocaust.

He is currently working as a consultant with the National Humanities Center’s Transpacific Teacher Scholars program. The project involves developing the curriculum around the upcoming anniversaries of the Vietnam War. He also serves on the Board of Directors for the National Council for History Education. He writes regularly for The Daily Beast. His essays have appeared in The New York Times, Smithsonian, and the Atlantic.

Our country is engaged in a discussion about the display of Confederate iconography from flags to monuments and even the names of streets and buildings. Communities across the country are debating whether reminders of the Civil War and the Confederacy specifically should continue to be displayed in public places. Kevin’s talk on May 23rd is therefore very timely. Kevin has been engaged in helping history teachers improve their classroom practices and engage in positive debate as to why the history of the Civil War era matters and why, 150 years later, it is still being fought over.

In preparation for Kevin’s May 23rd appearance, I strongly urge you to visit his Blog, Civil War Memory. He has been speaking throughout the Northeast, and on TV. Come to the meeting prepared to be educated and challenged.
Plans for summer travel, perhaps a Civil War battlefield? I have a couple suggestions for places to see and helpful websites to help you make good use of your time.

Check out the website civilwar.travel. They have compiled, by region, by state, Civil War Events, maps, an e-newsletter, tours, lectures, exhibits, living history, and more.

Check on Gary Adelman’s Civil War Trust Facebook page regularly. He will bring battlefield live streaming to you, which will interest you in making a battlefield visit.

Please consider a subscription to Civil War Times, where news and events, along with book reviews, are featured monthly.

Keep your eye on American History TV, for events and ideas as to where you might wish to travel.

Confederate Waterloo—The Battle of Five Forks, April 1, 1865, and the Controversy that Brought Down a General
Memorial Day is a federal holiday in the United States for remembering the people who died while serving in the country’s armed forces. The holiday, which is observed every year on the last Monday of May, originated as Decoration Day after the American Civil War in 1868, when the Grand Army of the Republic, an organization of Union veterans founded in Decatur, Illinois, established it as a time for the nation to decorate the graves of the Union war dead with flowers.

The practice of decorating soldiers’ graves with flowers is an ancient custom. The sheer numbers of soldiers of both sides who died in the Civil War (more than 600,000) meant that burial and memorialization took on new cultural significance. Under the leadership of women during the war, an increasingly formal practice of decorating graves had taken shape. In 1865, the federal government began creating national military cemeteries for the Union war dead.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch newspaper claimed in 1906 that Warrenton, Virginia, was the location of the first Civil War soldier’s grave ever to be decorated; the date cited was June 3, 1861. There is also documentation that women in Savannah, Georgia, decorated Confederate soldiers’ graves in 1862. The 1863 cemetery dedication at Gettysburg, PA, was, of course, a ceremony of commemoration at the graves of dead soldiers. In addition, local historians in Boalsburg, PA, claim that ladies there decorated soldiers’ graves on July 4, 1864, and Boalsburg promotes itself as the birthplace of Memorial Day.

Historian David Blight cites an observance by African Americans in Charleston, South that could be construed as the beginning of Decoration Day. Despite this lively debate, there is an “official” birthplace. On May 26, 1966, President Lyndon B. Johnson proclaimed Waterloo, NY as the holder of the title.
THE NEW BEDFORD CIVIL WAR ROUND TABLE WILL CONDUCT A MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR THOSE CIVIL WAR VETERANS BURIED AT RURAL CEMETERY.

Where: Rural Cemetery 149 Dartmouth Street, New Bedford, MA

When: 9:00 a.m. Saturday May 27, 2017
Keynote Speaker: Major Jon Mitchell

Please note that we will conduct this service in the usual location, the back section where many Civil War veterans are interred.

Please see the full program listed on page 5 of this Flag-bearer.
